TAKUMI

Inheriting Tradition Since the Azuchi-Momoyama Period

The journey begins with the careful selection and blending of raw clay. Each piece is meticulously shaved to evoke the characteristic bubbling of the glaze, then fired slowly over a long period to bring out the ethereal, pale patterns known as "Hiiro" (fire-color). The process concludes with a gradual, natural cooling phase.

Every single piece is unique, handcrafted from start to finish by a single artisan. These are not merely ceramics; they are works of art, showcasing the "Takumi" (master craftsmanship) honed over centuries.

The heartland of Mino ware spans the southern region of Gifu Prefecture, centered around Toki and Tajimi cities. During the Azuchi-Momoyama period, it flourished alongside the "Chanoyu" (tea ceremony) culture favored by samurai warlords. This era gave birth to highly artistic tea ceramics, including the warm, matte textures of Ki-Seto, the avant-garde designs of Oribe, and the snowy white glazes of Shino.

The Allure of Shino: Masterfully Crafted by Hand

The artisan's soul reflected in every texture and detail.
